

Statement on Genetically Modified Organisms (GMOs)

ADM supports a wide variety of technologies that can help farmers do more with less. This issue is a critical goal for agriculture; new technologies and products are key in the effort to feed a growing global population while limiting increased use of farmland and water. We encourage stakeholder dialogue on the topic and recognize and respect our customers' desire for options. We have systems in place to ensure we can meet our customers' need for identity-preserved crops and products. Because of our vertical integration, we have developed – for certain product lines – systems that track and preserve crop identity, providing our customers traceability from seed to factory to finished product.

As a business-to-business provider of ingredients, our products may be exempt from GMO product labeling requirements; however, we follow labeling standards that comply with applicable laws and that enable our customers to develop and implement appropriate labeling strategies and standards.
